Alcock's real sentiments than this dated 1st October, 1867. Sir R. Alcock

> "On the attainment of facilities for working mines, more than anything else, I believe, depends any prospect of future increase in foreign trade, or material improvement in the financial state of the Government. * * * If this last much longer, and those at the head of affairs in Peking continue to show the same impracticable spirit and slavish for of the opposition which innovatious provoke, there is nothing to be l looked for but anarchy and the subversion of a dynasty showing an utter incapacity for rule. Their sole aim is to stand still and offer a passive resistance to all efforts to move then forward.

"Yet in progress lies their only hope of safety and the stability of the throne, and there are times when the leading members of the Foreign Board seem to see this. The fact of their persistent refusal to give facilities for the effectual working of their shnost unlimited coal-fields, petroleum wells, and other sources of inexhaustible wealth is the more significant, as there never was a Government more poverty stricken or put to greater straits for money. * *

"I have long been convinced, in the event of a revision of treaties next year being ol imed, nothing is to be gained worth serious effect if the authority to work mines and the introduction of railroads and telegraphs be refused." Now, had this been dated subsequent to the announcement that the revision of the treaty was to be postponed, we should have been willing to credit Sir R. Al. cock, personally, with an enlightened comprehension of the necessities of the empire. Unfortunately he has so completely turned his back upon the views above expressed that we can only regard them as the indications of one of those occasional flashes of wisdom to which his best friends assert he is at times amenable We have it, at all events, upon record that some nine months ago the British ... Shanghae, 3 days' sight Bank, Tls. 721 Minister concurred in the necessity of taking a determined tone with the Chinese; and this justifies a hope in the possibility that he may yet once more return to a similar state of mind, especially when he becomes convinced of the indignant feeling to which his latest productions have given rise; and in view of this possibility, it is worth while to ask whether something might not be done to take advantage of any such opportunity to place before him and Her Majesty's Government a well-digested scheme for working the coal, and other, mines near the Coast under foreign supervision? We put the Chinese Government aside altogether. When our own authorities have made up their minds to accept a schemo, it must be presented to the Chinese in its entirety, subject to no modifications to suit their prejudices but with an unmistakeable avowal of our intentions to work it with or without their consent—the former resulting in certain advantages to the Chinese, the latter in an arrangement by which they will profit nothing. It is scarcely necessary to say which alternative would be > accepted, A company might easily be formed at scarcely any expense whatever until it commenced operations. An agent might be deputed to examine the coal fields of the North in extenso, in company with native officials. If it be urged that the Chinese would not consent, let us remind our readers that some three years ago the American Minister not only made the Chinese give assistance and protection to a United States citizen who was travelling for that purpose, but actually made the Chinese Government pay for the "valuable report" with which he furnished them to the tune of 500 taels and all expenses! of the creditors for refunding the deposits, of whom a foreign tirm is said to be one to the extent of about $4,000. The heat experienced here during the most part of the past week, almost unusual for the first month of summer, seems to have contributed to a heavy fall in the price of flowers (from 28 taels to 14 taels) adapted for scenting teas for the English market. Consequently, as about 'twenty catt es of flowers are sufficient to scent a picul of tea, the bargains in the new teas' could have been effected at three or four tiels lower, had our chanzes been less impatient and less apprehensive of not getting hold of 'crack" chops. Thus the scute Celestial with his palavering has once more got to the windward of his foreign customer. THE REBELLION. Even those Chinese, who have been reluctant hitherto to admit the possibility of such a rebellion occurring as could be supposed formidable enough to threaten the stability of the Imperial throne, are now beginning openly to express their fears as to the probable outturn of events in the north. The spasmodic successes which are reported on the side of the Imperial forces. are no longer sufficient to convince those who watch the progress of events, that there is sufficient strength left to cope with the present disasters. Whatever the minor de tails of the state of affairs, those broad facts which cannot be gainsaid, present, to the most saugume, an ugly appearance. Th statement that the Rubel Forces had been dispersed conveys a very erroneous impres sion as to what, we hear upon very gon authority, is actually the case. The truth is they are in such numbers that they have been able to divide without impairing their strength, and occupy some four or five stations from which there is little hope that the Imperialists can by possibility dislodge Meantime Li-Hung-Chang, upon whom the whole of the Imperialists' hopes were centred, tarries at Tientsin, and an pears afraid to leave that city. It is rumoured that a portion of the grain designed for Pekin has already been seized, and that the Maliomedan Rebels friendly to the

It would thus appear, as some time ago surmised by a contemporary; that the march on Tientsin was only a feint to draw away the Imperial forces from the Capital, and that Pokin is the prize at which the insurgents are aiming, and which it seems possible they may success it capituring. These circumstances alone are sufficient to cause grave apprehension; the more so, as, whatever may be the immediate course of events, it is certain that the Imperi forces can in the long run offer no opposition to the Rebels. They are already cowed by misfo tune and insubordinate from want of pay. But more than this, there is no longer among them confidence in their own cause or in their own leaders. Rumour is busy with surmises as to what will happen to Li should be fail in quelling the Rebellon; and it is even whispered that if he dispersed the insurgents and presented himself in Pekin, degradation if not loss of life, would be the only reward would receive, in consequence of his not liaving succeeded earlier. Thus, a very general feeling of suspicion as to the integrity of the Commander in Chief is gaining ground, and it is not impossible should fortune go against him, The will be able to retrieve himself only by ioining with the insurg nes and changing a rebellion into a revolution. - Recorder.
